Supreme Court curbs time-barred IBC claims

The Supreme Court set aside the NCLT admission of a Section 9 application by Sravanthi Infratech against Srinivasa Reddy Velagala on August 12, 2026. It held that a subsisting EPC contract does not create a continuing cause of action to revive a time-barred debt under the IBC.

Corporate sports divestments require precise asset and licence packaging to secure operational continuity. Nominal consideration structures facilitate clean exits from capital-heavy leagues.

THE THROUGH-LINE

This week highlights a decisive shift toward legal certainty across diverse commercial landscapes, from strict limitation enforcement in insolvency to rigorous protections for forfeited deposits and streamlined digital market frameworks. Across both high-stakes statutory tribunals and private infrastructure transactions, regulatory bodies are systematically dismantling ambiguous liabilities while reinforcing contractual discipline. For corporate strategists, navigating these developments demands absolute precision in timing, compliance, and risk allocation.
